

I am officially announcing that I am seeking re-election as Mayor of Morden in the upcoming municipal election.

After careful consideration about the role, the experience needed in the years ahead, and with the full support of my husband Henry, I have decided to seek and serve a full term as your Mayor.

Serving as Mayor of Morden has been a tremendous honour. Over the past three years, Council has made bold decisions that will shape our community for decades to come. These decisions were not always easy, but they were necessary to prepare Morden for growth, opportunity, and long-term success.

During this term, Council has advanced major infrastructure projects, strengthened regional partnerships, supported economic development, and laid important groundwork for Morden's future. Through strategic planning initiatives, we are building a strong foundation that will support our city as it continues to grow.

One of the most significant priorities before us remains the city's wastewater project.

This is one of the most important infrastructure investments in Morden's history. Completing this project is essential to unlocking future housing, supporting business growth, attracting investment, and ensuring our city is ready for the opportunities ahead.

That is why I am seeking another term as Mayor — because Morden is at a pivotal moment.

We have important work underway, and this is not the time to lose momentum. Morden needs experienced leadership to see major projects through, communicate clearly with residents, foster a strong and respectful Council team, and continue making decisions that position our city for long-term success.

I am proud of the strong regional relationships we have built — not only within our region, but also with provincial and federal partners. These relationships matter, and they will continue to play an important role in securing opportunities and investments for our community.

I believe deeply in this community and in what we can accomplish together. In the weeks and months ahead, I look forward to connecting with residents, hearing your ideas, and having meaningful conversations about the future of our city.

I have always valued hearing directly from residents, and I welcome your thoughts, concerns, and ideas as we continue building Morden's future together.
